E-5 promotion rate at all-time high

RANDOLPH AIR FORCE BASE, Texas (AFPN) — Out of 136 senior airmen from Lajes who were eligible for promotion to staff sergeant, 104 earned the new stripe.

The Air Force promoted 20,793 senior airman of the Air Force's 32,170 for promotion to staff sergeant.

With a 75.73 selection rate, Lajes beat the overall Air Force average of 64.63 percent.

This is the highest promotion rate in the 30-year history of the Weighted Airman Promotion System, Air Force Personnel Center officials here said.

The selection rate represents a 13.89-percent increase from last year's previous record of 50.74 percent.

The average selectee this year has 1.95 years time in grade and 4.73 years in service.

In June, the technical and master sergeant promotion rates were also at an all-time high. These record-setting percentages continue partly because of force stabilization.

"During the drawdown in the early to mid-'90s we just weren't able to promote people because there were limited vacancies," said Chief Master Sgt. Greg Haley, enlisted promotion and military testing branch chief here. "Now that the force has settled and end-strength numbers have leveled off, we've got more vacancies."

COMACC nominated for CSAF position

The President nominated Gen. John P. Jumper for assignment as the next chief of staff of the Air Force.

Jumper is the commander of Headquarters Air Combat Command.

A command pilot with more than 4,000 flying hours, mostly in fighters, the general has served in the U.S. Air Force since 1966. He has commanded a fighter squadron, two fighter wings and a numbered air force.

He also served in the Pentagon as deputy chief of staff for air and space operations, as the senior military assistant to two secretaries of defense and as special assistant to the chief of staff for roles and missions.

People PCSing should pay up

Question: I'm concerned about the amount of petty theft that occurs during the permanent change of station season.

I have known several people who left without paying their nannies, maids and grounds keepers. My grounds keeper said he loses hundreds of dollars because people leave without paying him.

I'm embarrassed by this. Many of us stationed here are much better off financially than some of the locals. Surely we can afford to pay the few dollars we have agreed to pay.

This definitely isn't going to improve our relationship with our host nation.

Is there anything that can be done?

Answer: Team Lajes members are hard-working, professional and honest. I believe most of the incidents like the one you mention are isolated and result from poor communication between employer and employee.

Unfortunately, it only takes one or two shortsighted people to create a negative impression of the entire team.

Each of us should strive every day to strengthen relationships with our Portuguese hosts. It is this relationship that allows us to perform our vital mission of enabling expeditionary airpower.

Treat people with respect and dignity and be honest. If you owe a debt, pay it. Say "excuse me" when you should. These are common-sense principles that will help in all aspects of our tour at Lajes. I'm confident most of this great team excels in good relations with their neighbors.

I must also address claims of financial irresponsibility brought against USFORAZ people. Under Article 134 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice, we are responsible for taking care of our debts.

In the technical agreement with our host nation, it's my duty to use all means permitted by United States law to get the member of the force or of the civilian component to satisfy legal obligations.

I'm committed to evaluating substantial complaints regarding U.S. personnel who fail to maintain their legal and financial responsibilities.

We are all fortunate to be serving our country in the Azores.

Keep up the great work ensuring you make every effort to leave a good impression during your time here as guests.

Military taxpayers also eligible for additional income tax refund

If military members owed federal income for 2000, a check for $300-$600 depending on their filing status, will be in the mail by September.

Lt. Col. Thomas K. Emswiler, executive direction of the Armed Forces Tax Council in the office of the assistant secretary of defense for force management policy, said military members are as eligible as other taxpayers for the federal refund that has been making headlines recently.

The tax bill just signed by the president created a new tax bracket of 10 percent and made the rate retroactive to Jan 1, he said. In the past, the lowest tax rate was 15 percent, so the 5 percent reduction will allow most taxpayers to get a refund.

The law provides that the mailing of refunds will start in July and be complete by the end of September.

Plans now call for the first checks to be mailed out Friday and the last batch on Sept. 28, Emswiler said.

Taxpayers will receive letters in July explaining how much to expect and when.

Anyone who had a federal tax liability for 2000 is eligible providing they were not claimed as someone else's dependant, Emswiler said.

Liability means owing more than the amount of nonrefundable credits such as the education and childcare credit.

Refundable credits, such as the earned income tax credit, don't count for determining eligibility or the refund amount.

People who filed a joint return last year and had at least $12,000 in taxable income, will receive a $600 refund, he said.

"That $600 represents the difference between taxing $12,000 at 15 percent and taxing it at 10 percent as provided under the new law."

Contracting gets new commander

Michelle Andersen
Public affairs

Maj. Richard Unis replaced Major Scott Stewart as commander of the 65th Contracting Squadron in a ceremony at the Top of the Rock Club, July 13.

The new commander came to Lajes from Air Combat Command where he was the deputy chief of contracting's acquisition management branch.

The next change of command is set for Aug. 14 when Team Lajes will say good-bye to 65th Air Base Wing and U.S. Forces Azores Commander Col. Bill Percival. He leaves Lajes for Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., where he will be the range wing commander.

Col. Judith Fedder will take over as the new commander. She is currently commander of the 31st Logistics Group, Aviano Air Base, Italy.

DOD, bank agree to changes in terms for credit card

WASHINGTON (AFPN) — The Department of Defense and Bank of America have agreed to a revised cardholder-terms-and-agreement policy for the government travel card. The new agreement is scheduled to take effect Aug. 10.

The new terms include increased fees for some transactions, according to Michael Weber, Air Force travel card program coordinator.

Although some fees have increased, he predicts only a small number of people will be affected.

"The Air Force has seen a significant decrease in travel credit card delinquencies," he said. "Since January, delinquencies have dropped from over 12 percent to currently 5 percent, and we continue to see a decline."

He said people can avoid the higher cash-advance fees simply by using the credit card to charge their lodging, transportation, meals and rental car costs.

"We encourage cardholders to use the card as much as possible and avoid using the ATM for cash advances to pay expenses that should be charged directly to the card," he said. Nearly all other additional fees will be avoided by paying bills on time and being financially responsible, he added.

New terms include the following:

- A late fee of $29 at 75 days past closing date on the statement of the account in which the charge first appeared.

- A $20 fee for expedited delivery of cards, which is reimbursable on the travel voucher; no fee will be charged for emergency replacement of lost/stolen/damaged cards while in a travel status.

- A $29 fee for returned checks.

- For cash advances, a fee of $2 per transaction or 3 percent of the transaction amount, whichever is greater.

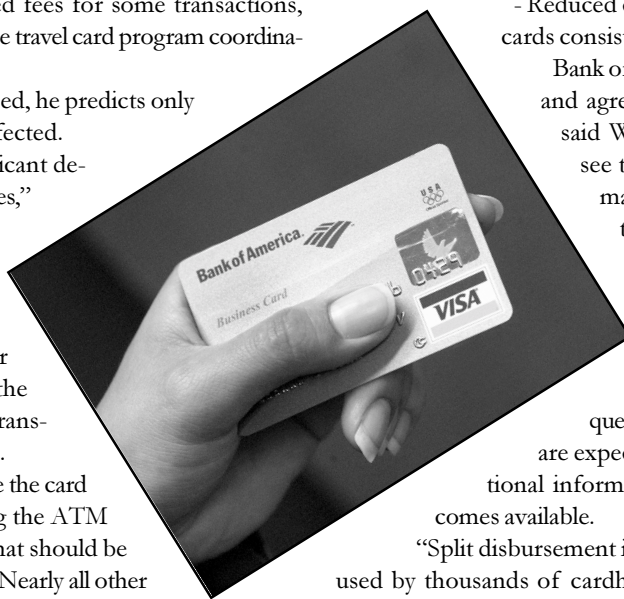

- Reduced credit lines on restricted and standard cards consistent with travel needs.

Bank of America will include the revised terms and agreement policy in the July statements, said Weber. Cardholders should expect to see this new cardholder agreement in the mail around July 7 to 9. It is for information only, and no action is necessary by the cardholder.

Additionally, future changes include a split disbursement default option and procedures to implement salary offset for delinquent accounts, said Weber. These changes are expected to take effect later this fall. Additional information will be announced once it becomes available.

"Split disbursement is a convenience option that is already used by thousands of cardholders," Weber said. He said people who want to know the balance on their cards can go online to the Electronic Account Government Ledger System.

At Lajes, information on how travelers can get access to EAGLS to view their balances on the Internet can be obtained from Staff Sgt. Tanya Belle, unit agency program coordinator, by calling 2-2411; or "The Cardholder Program Guide," a booklet available from unit APCs.

More vacancies have been created by more first- and second-term airmen than expected choosing not to re-enlist the past couple of years. When 'retention' is low, it leads to more staff sergeant slots that are then filled through promotions, he said.

A 2-year-old Air Force initiative that increases the number of E-5, E-6 and E-7 vacancies has also improved promotion opportunities.

Previously, the percentage of "top five" noncommissioned officers was limited to 48.5 percent of the enlisted force, a number that officials anticipate will continue to rise.

"We think these opportunities, with earlier promotions and pay increases, should be a great incentive for airmen to stay in the Air Force," Haley said.

People who tested will receive score notices which will let them see how their Promotion Fitness Examination and Specialty Knowledge Test scores rank against those they competed with for promotion within their Air Force Specialty Code.

The average score for those selected was 263.67 points based on these averages:

- 130.00 points for enlisted performance reports;
- 50.43 points for PFE;
- 52.60 points for SKT;
- 17.96 points for time in grade;
- 11.71 points for time in service; and
- 0.84 points for decorations.

Those selected will be promoted to staff sergeant beginning in September and continue to August 2002.

Staff Sgt. Apryl Thompson and Master Sgt. Kenneth Barr, 65th Security Forces Squadron, practice self-defense tactics. Barr will teach beginners self-defense classes Aug. 14 and 18.

Safety tips

Here are some suggestions to help avoid potential dangers:

— Trust your instincts and learn to recognize danger. If a situation feels wrong, get away as quickly as possible.

— Don't be distracted. Never wear headphones in public. An attacker will know you're not aware of the surroundings.

— Carry something that can be used as a weapon -- keys or a pen.

— When walking to the house or car, have your keys ready.

— Look under your car as you approach it and check the back seat before getting in.

— Don't look down. It shows weakness.

Self-defense class can save life

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik
Public affairs

You don't have to be Jackie Chan or Lucy Liu, but these days, it does pay to be a little bit street smart. Or, at least have some basic self-defense and personal safety training to protect yourself and your loved ones against would-be assailants.

Military members and their families are always on the move, whether it's with permanent changes of station, vacations to new cities and foreign countries or temporary duty assignments.

So, it's a good idea for people to have the basic skills to defend themselves from attack, no matter how safe of an area they may be living in or visiting, according to Staff Sgt. Apryl Thompson, 65th Security Forces Squadron's NCO in charge of crime prevention.

That's why members of the security forces squadron are offering a beginners self defense class to get people thinking about what could happen and how to react.

"When you're faced with an attack, the split second it takes to think about what to do might be too long," Thompson said. "At least, if you've had any self-defense training, something will pop in to your head."

The best defense, she pointed out, is to learn to recognize danger and avoid potentially unsafe situations whenever possible.

"But, if you find yourself face to face with an attacker, you've got to know what to do."

The military gives semiannual antiterrorism briefings and provides local threat information and travel advisories to members PCSing or going on leave or TDY to some foreign countries, but Thompson said that might not be enough.

"There are more dangers than just terrorists out there that people need to protect themselves from," she said. "There's more to being safe than checking for bombs under your car and varying your route."

"A lot of people are so busy focusing on things like that, they don't think about the everyday things that can happen like being assaulted, robbed or raped," she said. "We're not saying something bad is going to happen to everyone. But by taking self defense classes, at least people can be better prepared if something happens."

During the class, Master Sgt. Kenneth Barr, 65th SFS, will teach a variety of tips and techniques including how to develop basic weapons, how to get out of a grab, and how to use the knees, elbows and feet to strike an assailant. Barr holds a fourth-degree black belt in Kenpo Karate and a third-degree black belt in Tae Kwon Do.

"I give people the basic skills they need to be proactive in their personal safety and teach them how to respond if they're ever attacked," said Barr, who also teaches self defense tactics to security forces troops in his squadron. "Acquiring these skills doesn't mean you're a violent person, it just means you're better equipped to survive."

It's important to remember basic self defense training isn't going to make you an expert fighter, cautioned Chuck St. Pierre, commander of the Office of Special Investigations at Lajes.

"The classes will give you something to call back on," he said. "People will gain some skills that might prevent injury."

The old saying, out of sight, out of mind, isn't very useful concerning this topic, Thompson said.

"We just want people to think -- to be aware," Thompson said. "Self-defense training helps people avoid being a victim."

People who attend the classes should remember that self-defense is exactly that, St. Pierre explained.

"If you see a crime in progress, report it," he said. "Self-defense classes aren't going to give you the skills necessary to intervene. Leave that to the professionals."

One-session beginners classes, set for Aug. 14, 6-7:30 p.m. and Aug. 18 from 10:30 a.m.-noon, are open to men, women and teenagers more than 14 years old. To sign up call Thompson at 2-3611 before Aug. 7.

Creepy crawly carriers

They may be cute, but some reptiles can make people sick. According to the Centers for Disease Control, reptiles such as lizards, snakes and turtles are asymptomatic carriers of Salmonella. People should wash their hands immediately after handling any reptile. The CDC also said adults should make sure children wash their hands, too. Certain people should avoid contact with reptiles -- women who are pregnant; anyone who is taking drugs that suppress or alter immune function, including steroids and chemotherapy; anyone receiving radiation treatment; people subject to chronic infections; and people receiving or who have recently received antibiotic treatment. For more information call public health at 2-3464.

BULLFIGHTS

U.S. Forces Azores regulations prohibit U.S. military members, civilians and family members from actively participating in any type of bullfighting on the island.

To ensure safety when watching a street bullfight, choose a high place, out of the bull's range. Remember, the bulls can jump over many of the rock walls and temporary barriers that are built for the events.

Be careful and use common sense.
